

JUL 26 1962
FOIA b3b

MEETING PRESS—Thomas G. Corcoran, once aide to President F. D. Roosevelt, and Mrs. Anna Chennault, widow of Gen. Chennault, at Greater Los Angeles Press Club news conference. They are attending Flying Tigers survivors reunion. These photo

CPYRGHT

"No one knows just what it is," the former aide to President Roosevelt told a press conference Wednesday at the Press Club, "but we must not get caught flat-footed when it happens."
The Washington, D.C. Tower and Mrs. Anna Chennault, widow of Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault, leader of the Flying Tigers, later joined 100 survivors of the group at a 20th anniversary luncheon.

Seeks Domination

"Russia intends to dominate China," Corcoran said. "The Russians won't have a China they can't control because of the threat."

Mrs. Chennault, a language expert at Georgetown University in Washington, said, "Red China and Russia have differences, but I think they'll stick together."

She said she is against the free world sending grain to Red China at this time because the Communists would sell it to other nations to increase their power rather than give it to the starving people.

The reunion will move to the Ojai Valley Inn today. A Flying Tiger Pilot Trophy will be presented to Maj. Robert White, who won his astronaut wings in the X-15 rocket plane.

Battle of Reds Over China Believed Near

Something tremendous is going to happen in Red China within a year or two, according to Thomas Corcoran, who did the leg work to establish the Flying Tigers in China before the United States entered World

CPYRGHT